About the Conference

For centuries, Classical Languages have been known for their merits and the treasures of respective civilizations, countries and the society in particular. If scanned the pages of world history, we have Greek, Latin, Classical Chinese, Arabic, Hebrew, Farsi (Persian), Sanskrit along with several Indian languages like Tamil, Telugu, Kannada, Malayalam, Odia, Marathi, Bengali, Assamese, Pali, Prakrit serving as the foundations for modern languages and literature guiding us on our way towards future.

Recently in October, 2024, Marathi has been accorded the status of classical language and hence the conference organizers have decided to throw light on the journey of classical languages and literatures since the days unknown.

Objectives

- To examine the historical, literary, and philosophical significance of classical languages
- To explore the contemporary relevance of classical languages in modern education and research
- To encourage interdisciplinary approaches linking classical studies with linguistics, translation, and digital humanities
- To assess challenges & opportunities in the preservation & transmission of classical languages
- To envision future directions for classical language studies in a global and technological context
